Join the Club

As you plan your own activities this fall, don't forget about your career. Whether you are interested in becoming more active in your own professional organization, joining a sports club or yoga class, volunteering at your local food pantry, or attending a wine tasting event sponsored by the URI alumni chapter in your area, you are building your network.

In school, you called them extracurricular activities, and parents and advisors encouraged you to expand your horizons. The reasons were plentiful: meet new people, learn something new, gain expertise in an area of interest, have fun, and build relationships. It's still true. Participating in organized "extra-curricular" activities is an easy way to network, gain insight into local industries, and obtain career-relevant information that otherwise might not be available to you.

If you don't know where to start, try virtual networking by joining the URI alumni group on LinkedIn at linkedin.com/groupsDirectory, or see if one of the smaller URI affinity groups in LinkedIn would be a good place to start your networking activities. For person-to-person networking, find your local URI alumni chapter at advance.uri.edu/alumni/chapters and start active participation in that group. You'll meet some great people, and you never know where those new relationships will lead.
